Overview

Project Background

Location of plaza

Plaza view

The new plaza in front of Salesforce tower at 180 George Street is defined by the public artwork of Indigenous artist Daniel Boyd. The artwork is a canopy suspended above the plaza.

Naming this plaza is important for wayfinding and access for emergency vehicles.

The proposed name for the plaza, Ngana gili, means black light in the Sydney Aboriginal language. These words are pronounced nga-nah-gilly. Note, 'ng' at the start of this name is pronounced the same as 'ng' in the word sing (si-ng).

This name references astronomy and the movement of sun and moonlight seen through the circles cut out of the artwork's black canopy.

This proposal recognises local Aboriginal cultural heritage through naming and related interpretive signs.

Council resolved at its meeting on 17 March 2025 to seek community feedback on the proposed name. This is the first step in officially naming the plaza.

Community engagement was conducted from 14 July to the 11 August.

Purpose of engagement

To notify the community of the proposal to name this open space Ngana Gili Plaza and to gather feedback to determine community sentiment towards this proposal through multiple channels: online, onsite notices and physical letters.

Engagement findings summary

Overall sentiment

Sentiment towards the proposed name was evenly split with 3 submissions in favour and 3 against.

A submission from Lendlease (Circular Quay) Trust was received stating that they are 'generally supportive of the proposed naming and raises no objections.' Lendlease (Circular Quay) Trust are the owners of buildings adjoining the plaza at 180 George Street.

Outcomes of engagement

Your say on naming Ngana gili Plaza, Sydney

I write to invite your feedback on the City of Sydney's proposal to name a new plaza at 180 George Street, Ngana gili Plaza. At our meeting on 17 March, Council resolved to seek community feedback on the proposal.

Ngana gili means 'black light' in the Sydney Aboriginal language, and is pronounced 'nganah-gilly'. The 'ng' at the start of this name sounds the same as the ng in the word sing (si-ng).

Naming this plaza is important for wayfinding and access for emergency vehicles.

The proposed name recognises local Aboriginal cultural heritage.

Next steps

The results of this consultation will be reported to Council for consideration later this year.

PLANNING FOR THE FUTURE

New Aboriginal names for city spots

Trees and the night sky inspire titles for a local plaza, park and street.

📷 Darangara Park, Camperdown. Credit: Abril Felman.

Ngana gili Plaza, Sydney

Pronounced nga-nah-gilly. Ng as in sing.

A suspended canopy created by renowned contemporary artist and Kujila/Gangalu man Daniel Boyd defines the plaza at 180 George Street.

The proposed name for the space, Ngana gili, means 'black light' in the Sydney Aboriginal language.

It references astronomy and the movement of the sun and moonlight seen through the circles cut out of the artwork's black canopy.

Daranggara Park, Camperdown

Pronounced durran-garrah.

Cabbage tree palms have inspired the name for a redesigned small park on Lyons Road.

Daranggara is the Sydney Aboriginal word for these hardy local trees planted in the park.

Wiriyagan Place, Alexandria

Pronounced wirr-ie-yay-gan.

Wiriyagan Place is a private road that connects Alexandra Canal depot with Bourke Road.

Wiriyagan is a Sydney Aboriginal language word for a low-growing fruit-bearing tree, either a banksia or melaleuca.

These are resilient plant species common in the local area.

Employees at the depot care for Country, which includes looking after these trees.

Have your say

We're recognising Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cultures and heritage in public spaces.

These names are drawn from the Sydney Aboriginal words documented in Jakelin Troy's book The Sydney Language.

We're asking for your feedback on the new names.

You can provide feedback on the proposal by 5pm, Monday 11 August. Feedback will be reported to Council for consideration later this year.
