9. Community Consultation for the Botany Road Precinct

By Councillor Phelps

Question

In July 2021, the City of Sydney considered a planning proposal which aims to incentivise commercial development to strengthen the economic role of the Botany Road Precinct.

This is a particularly significant precinct to local communities, particularly to the inner city First Nations community. It is important that thorough community consultation and engagement occurs throughout the finalisation of the proposal, and in the approval of future Development Applications in the area.

Could the Chief Executive Officer please advise:

1. What community consultation has been done on this proposal?
2. What community consultation will be done on this proposal?
3. How will the community be notified that the proposal is on public exhibition?
4. Which community stakeholders will be engaged by the City during the exhibition and finalisation of this proposal?
5. Will there be any mandatory community engagement requirements for developers as part of this proposal?
6. Will there be any mandatory First Nations engagement requirements as part of this proposal?

10. Greening Sydney Strategy

By Councillor Phelps

Question

The Greening Sydney Strategy 2021 aims to achieve a “greener, cooler, more resilient city” and will do so by planting trees to cover 40 per cent of the city in greenery by 2050.

In previous efforts to green Sydney, the City of Sydney has planted hundreds of Plane Trees. While this species provides effective canopy, they have been banned in the City of Melbourne since 2019 due to their impacts on the native ecosystem, inability to withstand increasingly hot temperatures and negative health effects.

Professor Tim Flannery stated in a Sydney Morning Herald article that Plane Trees are “foreign weeds ... about as much use to our wildlife as concrete posts” and the “Which Plant Where” research points to native trees as more effective in withstanding rising temperatures.

The community response to this strategy included over 20 submissions requesting Council to discontinue the planting of Plane Trees and embrace more native species.

Could the Chief Executive Officer please advise:

1. How has the Council previously selected which trees will be planted in the City of Sydney Local Government Area?
2. How will the City of Sydney decide upon which tree species are to be planted throughout the City?
3. Which external Arborists has the City consulted in the past to determine which tree species to plant? Which of these experts were First Nations people?
4. Of the new trees planted, how many will be Plane trees?
5. Of the new trees planted, how many will be native trees?
6. What consideration is being given to native animal and bird species in the selection of trees?
